I had the pleasure to work with Rupa on a SharePoint initiative spearheaded by the marketing department at Argus Media. Because I was unfamiliar with SharePoint, I was dependent on Rupa to walk me through what our expectations and needs were and how we could leverage SharePoint to work for us. Thankfully, Rupa was able to do this as well as drive the project in a result-oriented manner while efficiently and effectively meeting deadlines.

Rupa took time to understand our company and the line of business we were in. She then positioned herself to provide professional support across IT, marketing, and sales by meeting with individual stakeholders to understand their needs and expectations as it pertained to our new SharePoint site.

Together we whiteboard what the SharePoint site would look like, taking into consideration everyone's input. She effectively built a wireframe and site map for the overall site and individual pages which allowed me to holistically comprehend the final product we could deliver to my company.

Rupa kept us on track with daily 15 minute standups and weekly meetings, producing clear status reports and communicating any issues she may have run into. I was also grateful for Rupa being our MS365 tech support liaison, contacting them whenever we had technical questions and successfully implementing their fixes and suggestions.

At the end of the project, Rupa delivered an aesthetically pleasing, user-friendly interface accessible to the whole company that effectively cataloged all of our marketing content and collateral and kept track of events through overlayed calendars. In addition, she helped create private, team-focused sites that enabled the individual teams within marketing to track initiatives, house content and have conversations.

I was dependent on Rupa to materialize a vision for my company and she went above and beyond. I am very grateful to Rupa for her professionalism, skill, and project management.
